Competition Law

Yaman Verma is a Partner in the Firm's Competition Law Practice with over 15 years' experience. He has been practicing competition law since the Competition Act came into force in India and has advised on a number of significant enforcement and merger control cases, with a focus on technology and e-commerce markets.

Yaman's works with clients across a spectrum of industries, including Microsoft Corporation, Meta Platforms Inc., Coal India Limited, Walmart, Inc., E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, Vodafone India Limited, WhatsApp, Inc., Flipkart Ltd., Temasek, Zomato, and Xiaomi.

Yaman is currently involved in a number of high-profile abuse of dominance enforcement cases involving digital markets. He is representing Meta Platforms, Inc. (formerly Facebook), and WhatsApp, Inc. before the NCLAT in their appeal against the CCI's decision penalizing Meta and WhatsApp for abuse of dominance on account of WhatsApp's 2021 Update to its privacy policy, where the NCLAT has stayed the implementation of one of two remedies. He also represented a confidential informant in the CCI's investigation into Google's Play Store and payments practices; in October 2022 the CCI found Google guilty of abuse of dominance, fined it approx. USD 144 million, and ordered a raft of changes to the way Google operated. He also advised several third parties who gave evidence in the CCI's Google Android investigation, which resulted in October 2022 in an approx. USD 162 million fine and a host of behavioural remedies. He advised OSLabs Technology in the Google Android appeals process, where he successfully opposed Google getting interim relief on the CCI's directions, before both the NCLAT and the Supreme Court. The NCLAT subsequently substantially upheld the CCI Order. He previously successfully defended Microsoft against an allegation of unfair and discriminatory pricing, WhatsApp against allegations of abuse of dominance, online retailer Flipkart against allegations of preferential treatment and discrimination, and online food platform Zomato against allegations of abuse of dominance. He also successfully represented Matrimony.com in an abuse of dominance case against Google, where the CCI fined Google approx. USD 17 million. He has successfully represented Coal India Limited against allegations of abuse of dominance by explosives manufacturers as well as certain power generation companies. He recently successfully defended Coal India limited before the CCI against allegations of abuse of dominance in relation to its e-auction scheme. He is currently defending the Flipkart group before the CCI against allegations of preferential treatment, exclusivity and deep discounting.
