Ranjana Adhikari is a Partner in the General Corporate practice group of the Firm specializing in Technology, Media and Telecom ("TMT") and Data Protection.

As an industry specialist, she has deep expertise in advising both international and domestic clients on a broad range of complex and nuanced TMT matters. Ranjana has more than 18 years of experience and has been a trusted advisor to a wide variety of clients including new-media/OTT platforms, online journals and publications, social media platforms, online gaming companies, game developers, news aggregator platforms, web3 and cryptocurrency platforms, broadcasting companies, film production houses and professional sports entities.

Ranjana advises on TMT and Data Protection in relation to regulatory issues, product reviews, multi-jurisdictional launches, market entry strategies, policy advocacy, structuring, cyber security breaches, intellectual property and content-driven licensing deals, technology collaborations, outsourcing deals, website/app take-downs, intermediary liability & platform governance, defamation et al.

She has also been particularly advising several new media/OTT clients, as well as broadcasters, social media platforms, news platforms, production houses and sports teams. This includes regulatory advice on information technology laws, various content laws applicable to content providers, entry strategy for media companies, drafting and negotiations of content licensing agreements (both episodic and film), original film and episodic production deals, brand endorsement arrangements, music licensing strategy, sports endorsements and advisory on advertising laws. She stands out for her exceptional understanding of issues concerning convergent media and its intersection with technology along with her extensive and robust experience of working with traditional media businesses. One of the nuanced areas which she handles for media & entertainment clients is helping them put in place self-regulation policies for content-intensive business models. Among her notable accolades, she has been recognized as a leading lawyer for Technology Media & Telecommunications for India by Chambers & Partners. In 2026, she has been recognised as one of India's top ten 'Cyber' lawyers by RiSE Ratings, devised by RSGi. She has also been recognised by Asian Legal Business as one of 'ALB's Top Female Lawyers' in India in 2023 and as one of the 'ALB's Top TMT Lawyers' in India in 2023 and 2022. She has also been consistently ranked by Legal 500 as 'Next Generation Partner-TMT' and 'Recommended Lawyer' for the Asia Pacific region since 2022. Further, Who's Who Legal (now Lexology) has consistently ranked Ranjana as a 'Recommended' practitioner since 2021 in their 'Sports and Gaming Chapter'. Lexology Index 2026 has ranked her as 'Highly Recommended Client Choice' in Sports and Gaming. She has also been nominated for the
